Typhoon Season

On June 6, the Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (PAGASA) announced the onset of the 2010 rainy season. The rainy season, which is associated with the Southwest Monsoon, is generally expected to last until the end of September. During this time, the Philippines may experience tropical depressions, tropical storms, and typhoons. From June 2009 to October 2009, PAGASA recorded 14 of these weather events in the Philippines Area of Responsibility, eight of which made landfall.

You can check for weather updates at the following websites:

In preparation for the Typhoon season, the U.S. Embassy encourages U.S. Citizens to take the following precautionary measures in order to ensure minimal disruption or damage should a major weather event occur.

- Keep an up-to-date list of local emergency phone numbers;
- Secure loose outdoor items, such as limbs, roofing material, windows (coverings), doors, patio furniture, debris (trash), etc.;
- Keep vehicle fuel, generator fuel, and water tanks at no less than 2/3 capacity;
- Check and charge radios;
- Charge cell phones;
- Protect your vital travel documents (i.e. U.S. Passport, Birth Certificate, picture ID's, etc.) from potential water damage by placing them in a waterproof container;
- Gather flashlights, tools, and first aid supplies;
- Procure fresh batteries, hand-held radios (battery or crank operated), candles, matches, water, non-perishable food, pet supplies, and ice;
- Assure an adequate supply of prescription medications
- Stay home and let your family & office know how you plan to weather the storm;
- After the storm has passed, contact your family in the United States to let them know you are okay.

In general, use prudent judgment to plan ahead for any surprises or hardships.
